GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN LOOMS AS TALKS STALL

1 Partisan finger-pointing over immigration policy on Tuesday left the Congress and the White House stumbling closer to a possible federal government shutdown by the end of the week, although Wall Street held out hopes for a deal to prevent that. Republicans who control Congress are expected to try to push another stopgap funding bill and get it to President Donald Trump's desk before Friday's midnight deadline. But there are perils. Conservatives want a large increase in defense spending that such a bill would not provide. Many Democrats might withhold their support unless immigration policy is addressed. The slim Republican margin of control in the Senate means Trump's party will need some Democratic support to resolve the government funding stand-off.

JUSTICE DEPT TO APPEAL 'DREAMER' COURT RULING

2 The Justice Department on Tuesday said it will ask the Supreme Court to overturn a judge's ruling last week that blocked President Donald Trump's move to end a program that protects hundreds of thousands of immigrants brought to the U.S. illegally as children. The Trump administration will file an appeal of the judge's injunction directly with the conservative-majority Supreme Court as well as seek to appeal to the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the department said. The Republican president in September rescinded the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA), a program put in place in 2012 by his Democratic predecessor Barack Obama, effective in March. A variety of Democratic state attorneys general, organizations and individuals challenged Trump's action in multiple federal courts.

COLOMBIA BRIDGE COLLAPSE

3 A bridge collapsed in the Guayabetal municipality on the road that connects Bogota, Colombia, with the city of Villavicencio on Monday. When the structure suddenly collapsed, there were about 35 or 40 workers at the site. Ten workers were killed and eight injured, according to authorities.

DOCTOR SAYS TRUMP IN 'EXCELLENT' HEALTH

4 President Donald Trump had a normal score on a cognitive exam and is in excellent health, although he could benefit from a lower-fat diet and more exercise, the White House physician said on Tuesday. "In summary, the president's overall health is excellent," Dr. Ronny Jackson told reporters. "He continues to enjoy the significant long-term cardiac and overall health benefits that come from a lifetime of abstinence from tobacco and alcohol." The examination took place on Friday toward the end of a week in which Trump's mental fitness for the job had come under intense scrutiny after a controversial book, "Fire and Fury: Inside the Trump White House," portrayed him as childlike and mercurial. Jackson said Trump had performed well on a cognitive assessment, which the president had requested.

CALIFORNIA SIBLINGS TREATED AFTER ORDEAL

5 The 13 California siblings kept in "horrific" conditions by their parents, including some who were shackled to furniture, others who were starved, were being treated after an ordeal that could leave them scarred for years, authorities said on Tuesday. Police were investigating the circumstances under which the parents, David Allen Turpin, 57, and Louise Anna Turpin, 49, had subjected their children to the abuse, Capt. Greg Fellows of the Riverside County Sheriff's Department said. The couple was arrested on Sunday and each charged with nine counts of torture and 10 counts of child endangerment, the sheriff's office said. They were each held on $9 million bail, with a court hearing scheduled for Thursday. Some of the children were being fed and in stable condition at a local hospital, officials said.

Pet owners warned of uptick in dog flu cases

nikki.mascali@metro.us

Here's what you need to know to protect your pup.

As many states are experiencing a very active flu season right now, another form of influenza is also making its way across the country, but this one is targeting your four-legged friends.

Like human flu, dog flu is highly contagious — and can be deadly in some cases. As of last week, veterinarians in at least 46 states, including Pennsylvania, Colorado, Florida and California, have treated dogs that were infected with the virus, Fox News initially reported.

"Canine influenza is very similar to the human form in that it is self-limiting and not life-threatening," said Dr. Robin Brennen, senior medical director at Animal Care Centers of New York City. "Influenza can be fatal, but mortality is less than 5 percent."

Dog flu symptoms to watch out for

The symptoms of dog flu are often akin to those related to "kennel cough": coughing, sneezing, fever, nasal and eye discharge, a decrease in appetite and general mood changes, but some of the milder symptoms can turn into pneumonia, Brennen said.

"Prolonged coughing fits, difficulty breathing, lethargy and inappetence should be more causes for concern," she added. "Suspicions should be raised if a large population of dogs gets sick at the same time, as influenza has about an 80 percent infection rate. This is because it is a relatively new disease, and natural immunity has not occurred."

There are two strains of dog flu, H2N8 and H3N2. The former was first found in racing greyhounds in Florida in 2004, and the strain is believed to have come from a horse flu strain, according to the American Veterinary Medical Foundation. The latter strain was first identified in the U.S. in 2015 after respiratory illness was detected in Chicago.

"Canine influenza is transmitted through droplets or aerosols containing respiratory secretions from coughing, barking and sneezing," the AVMA said.

It can be spread via kennels, shelters, dog parks, doggie daycares, dog shows, food and water bowls and collars and leashes. While it cannot be transmitted to humans, dog flu can be transmitted from them — and remain viable, or live and infectious, on surfaces for up to 48 hours, on clothes for 24 hours and on hands for 12 hours.

If your dog is showing any of the above symptoms of canine influenza or is just not acting like their usual self, seek veterinary care.

My dog has canine influenza. Now what?

According to the AVMA, infected dogs should be isolated for at least four weeks, preferably in "an area with a separate air supply," and treatment should be designated by your vet. The dog flu virus seems to be easily killed by common disinfectants found in homes and most pet facilities, the organization added.

Anyone who comes in contact with a dog infected with canine influenza should frequently wash her hands, especially before and after handling or cleaning, and if able, protective attire should be worn to prevent the virus from spreading to clothes.

There is a two-dose vaccine that will treat both strains of dog flu, but "immunity is not at its peak until two-plus weeks after the second booster," said Dr. Robin Brennen. ISTOCK

HOW TO TREAT DOG FLU

Just like with people, dog flu treatment is often supportive, Brennen said, and "you want to treat the symptoms the dog has and maintain hydration and nutrition."

There is a two-dose vaccine that will treat both H3N8 and H3N2 strains, but "immunity is not at its peak until two-plus weeks after the second booster," Brennen said.

While it can reduce your pup's risk of contracting dog flu and reduce its severity and duration, vaccination may not prevent infection altogether, she warned.

As in their human counterparts, dogs who get the flu vaccination may experience pain at the injection site, facial swelling, mild fever or an allergic reaction.

DANA-FARBER CANCER INSTITUTE

Dana-Farber Offers Five Healthy Habits for the New Year

Whether you're trying to lose weight, gain weight, or just stay healthy, the New Year always brings a new set of goals and resolutions. While this change in lifestyle can often feel daunting, achieving goals does not have to be a solo mission.

Dana-Farber Cancer Institute advised you to let friends, family members and co-workers know what your goal is and what you are trying to do. Having these people around can give you the support you need to reach that goal.

As you work out healthy goals for 2018, consider these five tips:

1. Set SMART goals

Instead of using the word "resolutions," we suggest making SMART goals, which are specific, measurable, attainable, realistic, and have a time frame. Stay away from general goals like "lose weight" or "get healthy," and instead, set specific numbers for your achievements. For example, aim to lose five pounds by the end of March, or plan to attend the gym three days a week.

2. Avoid sitting all day

There are a number of health implications that can come with sitting for long periods of time. If you spend most of your day sitting, try to get up as often as possible to stretch your legs, even if it means putting a reminder in your calendar every day.

3. Eat colorful food

In addition to maintaining a healthy weight it's recommended that your diet have fruits and vegetables rich in color. Colorful produce is filled with phytonutrients, which can boost your immune system and help your body with recovery after treatment or surgery.

4. Limit alcohol consumption

Reducing alcohol in your diet will not only save money, it may also lower the risk of developing some cancers.

5. Be patient

As you work through each of your New Year goals, remember to be kind to yourself. Things aren't going to happen overnight. Working small changes into your life may take some time, but they will make a big difference in the long run.

In addition to these tips, Dana-Farber also recommends seeking guidance from nutritionists, counselors, personal trainers, or survivorship experts who can help you set realistic goals and keep you on track.

Baby Kardashian-West is here!

Blessed be: The third Kardashian-West baby has finally blessed us with her presence.

Kim Kardashian and Kanye West's surrogate gave birth to a baby girl, whose name we don't yet know, on January 15 at 12:47 am.

Kardashian announced the news on her website, writing, "Kanye and I are happy to announce the arrival of our healthy, beautiful baby girl. We are incredibly grateful to our surrogate who made our dreams come true with the greatest gift one could give and to our wonderful doctors and nurses for their special care."

The baby girl joins older siblings North, 4, and Saint, 2, who are apparently very, very excited about it. "North and Saint are especially thrilled to welcome their baby sister," she wrote.

Congratulations to the Kardashian-Wests on the new addition to their family. Babies are fun! Until they're vomiting on you, but even then it's fine because they're cute!

January & Nick are a thing, apparently

January Jones has a new and frankly very surprising beau.

The "Mad Men" alum is reportedly dating Nick Viall — a man that our close friend calls "a feat of artificial intelligence, successfully engineered to be boring and appreciate mirrors." Traditionally, you may know him as the "Bachelor" that had the nerve to reject Rachel Lindsay on the 21st season of the series.

The couple got together after she admitted on "The Late Late Show with James Corden" that she's a huge fan of "The Bachelor."

"You don't know if you like him or if he's a scumbag, but that's why I'm attracted to him, maybe," Jones said of Viall on the show. Way to neg him, girl!

A source tells Page Six that the pair has been dating for about two months.

Cool, I guess? I mean, whatever makes y'all happy.

Girl, I guess.

Timothee Chalamet is bae

Literal angel baby.

Timothee "🍑" Chalamet took to Instagram to announce that he's donating his salary from working on Woody Allen's "A Rainy Day in New York" to Time's Up, the LGBT Center in New York and RAINN. Atta boy!

"I am learning that a good role isn't the only criteria for accepting a job — that has become much clearer to me in the past few months." He adds: "having witnessed the birth of a powerful movement intent on ending injustice, inequality and above all, silence."

But don't worry — even though Chalamet is having an a-woke-ening, local elderly man Alec Baldwin is not. "Woody Allen was investigated forensically by two states (NY and CT) and no charges were filed," the 59-year-old tweeted, after Chalamet's post.

"I worked w WA 3 times and it was one of the privileges of my career."

Well, whatever. We believe Dylan Farrow (who has accused Allen of sexually abusing her as a child). And it looks like more people in Hollywood finally do, too.

Sharon Stone laughed at clueless interviewer

In case you haven't been paying attention, sexual misconduct is rampant … everywhere. It's a motherflipping epidemic. So obviously, when an interviewer asked actress Sharon Stone if she'd ever experienced inappropriate behavior in Hollywood, Stone did what any sane person would do: She laughed for 10 full seconds.

Her laughter then made its way up to the clouds and rained back down onher interviewer, Lee Cowan, who literally said, "You're laughing. I don't know if that's a nervous laugh or 'Are you kidding me? Of course I was' laugh."

Stone then kept it 100, as she does, telling Cowan, "I've been in this business for 40 years, Lee. Can you imagine the business I stepped into 40 years ago? Looking like I look, from Nowhere, Pennsylvania? I didn't come here with any protection," she said. "I've seen it all."

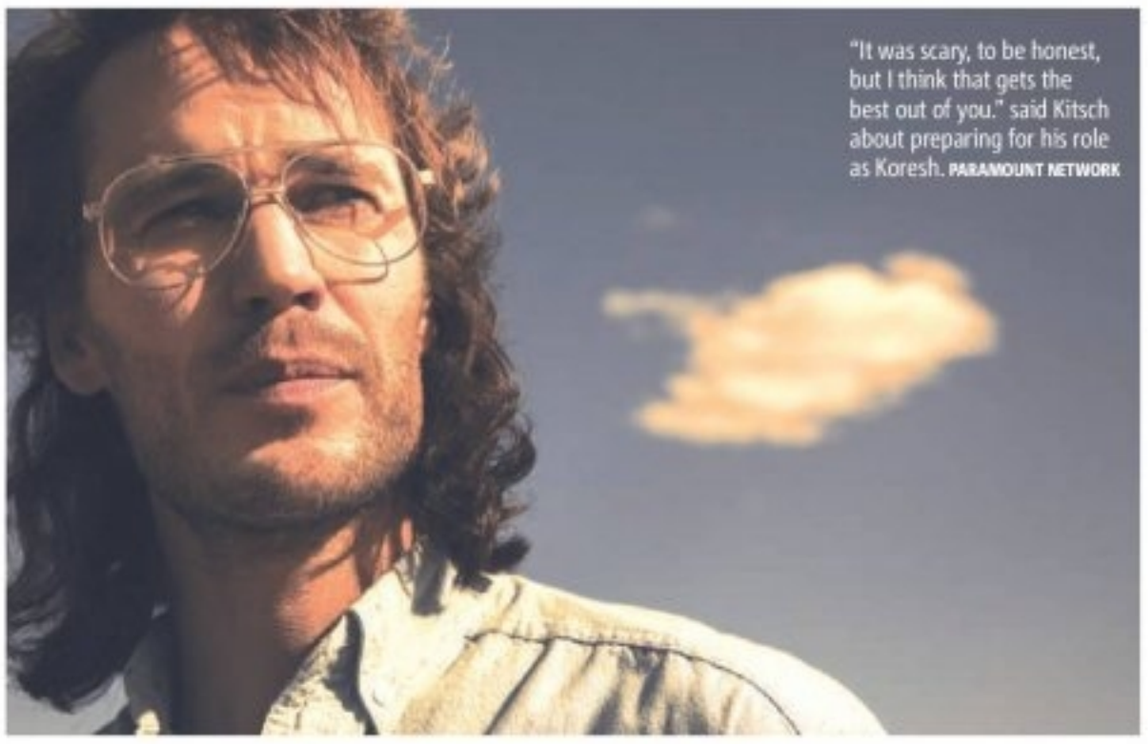
Um, we think we love Sharon Stone now? Yes. We cherish Sharon Stone now. Sorry it took so long, Shar.

LOL indeed.

Taylor Kitsch on his new miniseries 'Waco'

The actor portrays the infamous cult leader David Koresh.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us



"It was scary, to be honest, but I think that gets the best out of you." said Kitsch about preparing for his role as Koresh. PARAMOUNT NETWORK

2018 marks the 25th anniversary of the horrific conflict that took place in Waco, Texas, between members of the cult known as the Branch Davidians, led by David Koresh, and the ATF (Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms). The agents were given an order by then-Attorney General, Janet Reno, to intervene at Koresh's compound in order to seize an illegal weapons stockpile kept by the cult. As a result, a firefight and fierce 51-day standoff took place outside of the compound that ended in tragedy with the Davidians, at the order of Koresh, burning their entire compound with everyone inside it to the ground. So much has been said over the years, as many believe that not only were the Davidians in the wrong for what they did but that the government had also violated their rights during this siege.

This sad moment in American history has been adapted into a miniseries titled "Waco" with Taylor Kitsch portraying David Koresh. The miniseries was written and directed by the Dowdle Brothers premieres Jan. 24 on the newly minted Paramount Network. I caught up with Kitsch to find out what it was like playing the infamous cult-leader.

What was it like getting into character to play David Koresh?
It was beyond scary. Learning to play the guitar and sing (David Koresh played and sang in a bar band with fellow members of the Branch Davidians) and obviously diving into his whole story. Diving into David's home videos and hundreds of hours of calls. Reading David Thibodeau and Gary Noesner's books ("Waco: A Survivor's Story" and "Stalling for Time: My Life as an FBI Hostage Negotiator.") You just try to take in as much information as you can. It was scary, to be honest, but I think that gets the best out of you.

Both sides of this standoff, the ATF and the Branch Davidians, could be blamed for how everything played out at Waco. Did you have any sympathy for Koresh while playing him?
Yes, to be blunt. For all of the Davidians. The kids and their families. Obviously, it's an amalgamation of ego on both sides. Just one wrong decision after another. I truly believe that the end didn't have to happen that way. Not that it's about sides or anything. I think what we do in this is play it all out as matter-of-fact as much as we can and allow the viewers to make their own decisions. I think that was super important and we were really conscious of that while filming.

2018 marks the 25th anniversary of the standoff in Waco. What do you think is Waco's legacy?
There was a huge injustice there on so many fronts. ... As for the legacy: I think that's up for discussion. Which is the beauty of it as well. You take all of those things in and hopefully we can talk about it and raise awareness that one kind of f—k up after another lead to this. On both sides! You watch some of the hearings they had on Capitol Hill and see that there were some biases in it and the political game being played at its best. That's what's scary as well. For David's legacy? I feel like there is so much more to be said. I wish he was still around so we could pick his brain and talk to him, and the rest of the Davidians, so that we could learn more so that it never happens again.

Here's everything you need to guarantee more luxurious bathing this year. ISTOCK

Take better baths in 2018

You deserve it.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Here's a resolution that's easy to keep, good for you and actually perfect for the winter: Take more baths.

Unlike Dry January, the Whole 30 diet, or other punishing New Year's challenges, bathing is a seasonally-appropriate habit that's both self-indulgent and virtuous.

While soaking in the tub, you can zone out or practice mindfulness, read a book or stream a show, listen to music or be silent, sip a glass of wine or let the self-care be a substitute for substances.

Here's everything you need to pimp out your bath time.

Invest in bath bombs

This isn't a hot springs in Tuscany; it's your apartment bathtub. You're gonna need a little something to jazz up the tap. Enter bath bombs. The blend of Epsom salt, citric acid, baking soda and essential oils will transform the bath water with good-smelling suds and swirling colors, looking kinda like My Little Pony on an acid trip. It's exciting and you'll feel like a kid again, but still adult, is what we're saying. Lushusa.com, $5.95-$8.95

Pimp your entertainment

For a truly next-level bath experience, you need this water-resistant teak bathtub caddy so you can bring some entertainment into the tub without completely soaking it. Essentially an adjustable wooden tray that fits across the bathtub, it comes with a slot to hold your mug or wine glass, a book rest to prop up your reading or streaming materials, be it a magazine or an iPad, and a soap dish for easy access. Bedbathandbeyond.com, $39.99

Create some ambience

You're less likely to indulge in tub time if you hate your bathroom. Turn it into your home spa with the addition of candles, plants and a quality speaker system. When it comes to candles, take your pick; our only advice is to make sure they're well-contained in a jar or glass to protect from moisture. As for plants, the best options are tropical greens that thrive in humidity. Think ferns, philodendrons, bamboo, or air plants. For speakers, go for the JBL Flip Portable Bluetooth Speaker. It has great sound quality and is all but waterproof (just don't submerge it). Prices vary, Amazon

Pamper yourself

Make sure you're as comfy as can be with a nonslip mesh bath pillow, complete with suction cups. Rest easy. $16.98, Amazon

B's with chance to bury the Habs

The Bruins have the opportunity to win three games over their rival in a span of a week.

RICH SLATE
sports@metro.us

Danton Heinen blows past Montreal's Charles Hudson last Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

If you are a Bruins (24-10-8) fan, you really couldn't have drawn things up any better this week at least in terms of what the team can potentially do their most bitter rival - the Canadiens (18-20-6) - over the next few days.

Boston beat Montreal, 4-3, in a thoroughly entertaining shootout at the Bell Centre on Saturday night. Now, the Habs come to TD Garden for a game on Wednesday (7:30, NBC Sports) before the Original Six clubs meet once again on Saturday night (7, NESN) in Montreal. It's extremely rare to see the same opponent this many times in such a short span during the regular season, but nobody could possibly argue which team is in better shape heading into these two pivotal matchups.

Despite a 3-2 overtime loss to Dallas (25-17-3) on Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Boston is still 7-0-3 in its last 10 games and its point-streak was extended to a whopping 13 games (9-0-4). The B's have two games in hand over Montreal and yet they have amassed 14 more points than former head coach Claude Julien's struggling outfit. The Canadiens lost an overtime contest of their own on Monday as they fell 5-4 to the Islanders (23-18-4) at home. In that game, Montreal fired 56 shots but they were stymied by the immortal Thomas Greiss, who made a career-high 52 saves to pick up the key two points for New York — which is in a real dog fight for a Wild Card spot in the Eastern Conference.

Let's be honest here: The Canadiens are far from a good team in 2017-18. Beset by injuries to key players like defenseman Shea Weber and the underachievement of other top players like Max Pacioretty (who has been the subject of numerous trade rumors), the Habs are likely to finish way outside of the playoff race in the East. This is precisely what makes them so dangerous though to the Bruins and any other contender in the NHL: they have absolutely nothing to lose while they play out the string on this ill-fated campaign.

NHL Standings

A glance at the Eastern Conference standings.

Lightning 31-10-3, 65 pts
Capitals 28-14-3, 59 pts
Bruins 24-10-8, 56 pts
Maple Leafs 25-17-3, 53 pts
Blue Jackets 25-17-3, 53 pts
Devils 22-12-8, 52 pts
Penguins 24-19-3, 51 pts
Islanders 23-18-4, 50 pts
Rangers 22-17-5, 49 pts
Flyers 20-15-8, 48 pts

Montreal is 3-5-2 in its last 10 games with a goal-differential of minus-23 overall. As you would expect, they are terrible on the road (7-12-1) - whereas the Bruins are great at the Garden (14-5-4) and very good on the road (10-5-4) with a solid goal-differential of plus-29.

"Teams are coming and they look at the way we play," noted ageless Bruins captain Zdeno Chara. "They're going to be, obviously, motivated to play us. We've just got to make sure we're ready for everybody who comes into this building or who we're going to play."

In between these latest installments of the best rivalry in hockey, Boston visits the Islanders on Thursday and Montreal goes to Washington (28-14-3) on Friday (7:30).

Tomlin to get canned?

Pittsburgh head coach and Patriots nemesis Mike Tomlin may be on his last days when it comes to his employment by the Steelers. A report by ProFootballTalk Tuesday said that the franchise's limited partners were so upset by team's loss to the Jaguars on Sunday that they plan to lobby owner Art Rooney to fire Tomlin. Aries Don't accept help unless you know what's expected of you in return. Someone will have a change of heart and let you down.

Taurus Partnerships will work well for you. Collaborate to come up with a plan that can help you advance. Control emotions when dealing with personal matters.

Gemini Personal improvements will build your confidence and give you a greater sense of what you have to offer. Love and romance will change how or where you live.

Cancer Intelligence will be required when dealing with personal money or legal matters. Take a pass if someone urges you to let someone else handle your affairs.

Leo Emotions will surface if you can't come to terms with what others want. Don't be afraid to do your own thing, cut your overhead and lower stress.

Virgo An energetic schedule will be illuminating. Try new things and challenge your strength, courage and discipline. Stay focused and you will make a difference.

Libra Take on a physical challenge and re-evaluate your feelings and domestic situation. A change may be necessary, but first you must come up with a strategy.

Scorpio Don't let an emotional response you receive deter you from following your heart. You must live life your way if you want to find peace and happiness.

Sagittarius Keep your thoughts secret. Saying or revealing something prematurely will put you in an awkward position. Speak the truth or say nothing at all.

Capricorn An innovative idea can give a presentation some needed pizazz. Welcome input and be ready to collaborate with people just as eager to try something new.

Aquarius Trusting someone with your money will lead to disappointment. Do your research and be willing to walk away from a deal that poses unanswered questions.

Pisces Take care of personal money matters and documents that need to be dealt with before tax time. Being fully prepared will lead to greater opportunities. EUGENIA LAST
